Planting peace

Lesley Milbourne and Chris Graham plant the 12th and final tree to complete the Minden Peace Grove at a ceremony last Thursday. The Peace Grove symbolizes Canada's commitment to world peace and environmental protection. Minden's deputy-reeve Lewis Stevens said park benches and picnic tables may be added. See story page 2.

Future of hospital still concerns council

Minden Council will continue to pursue confirmation of a meeting with the board of St. Joseph's General Hospital.

The matter was again brought to the table at last Thursday's council meeting when councillor Lewis Stevens commented on a letter he recently received from board chairman Melvin Johnson.

The letter was in response to earlier correspondence from Stevens, who expressed his personal feelings about the future of the Minden Hospital. Johnson's response mentions Lewis' concerns but offers no new insight into the board's plans for the hospital.

"All he's done is highlighted everything I had in my memo," said Stevens. Council must continue to pursue a meeting with the board. And, he added, council has to be well prepared when a meeting is arranged.

Although local MPP Dennis Drainville has promised that the Minden Hospital will not be closed, council members have expressed concern about the level of service the facility will provide in the future. Council has written to Drainville asking for assurance that there will be no reduction in services.

In the mean time, a study is underway by the planning and development committee which is to examine long-term and acute care needs in the county. A fundraising drive has been initiated by a local group and the Minden Rotary Club has committed $125,000 for acute and long-term care facilities in the Minden area.

Commenting on the study, Stevens said the primary focus is on long term care. "I'm more concerned with the Minden Hospital than with long-term care," he said. "We should be looking to do something."

Later in the meeting, Reeve Bern Berry brought the issue to the floor again. Responding to the downturn in local construction, he said the construction of a new hospital could provide jobs for local tradesmen.

Berry, who also sits on the planning and development committee, suggested that a new, centrally-located hospital would solve two problems. The county owns property at the Alsaw flats, he said, which is suitable for a 40-bed hospital.

"I'd like some higher level of government to inject some money into this county," said Berry. A large construction project would go a long way in easing the county's unemployment rate, which is hovering around 30 per cent. He noted that the county intends to build new offices, but that project is on hold.

"It's scary," he said, referring to the downturn in construction. "I don't know what we'll do. The only thing is the county building and it's a long way off."

Berry again suggested his hospital proposal would help matters. "Maybe it's the thing to do instead of studies. We need some employment in Haliburton County."

Yes...no....or maybe

Opposing sides debate Constitutional Accord at the high school

A "yes" vote on the constitution will lead to civil war. Or, it will strengthen the ties that bind this country. It all depends on which side of the argument you tend to believe.

Haliburton residents had a chance to gain some new insight into both sides of the arguments last Thursday during a debate at the high school. Barry Devolin and Munroe Scott presented the "no" arguments while David Bishop and Guy Scott argued in favour of the Charlottetown Accord.

"This constitution is a recipe for civil war," Munroe Scott told the large gathering. It creates ethnic governments by granting the right of self government to Canada's Aboriginal peoples, he said. "Canada is possibly the most ethnic country in the world." He cautioned that this agreement gives ethnic governments the power to utilize the notwithstanding clause which governs the Charter of Rights and Freedoms. "This is a recipe for civil war entrenched in the constitution," he warned.

Bishop, on the other hand, expressed his belief in the strength of Canada. "I have an ingrained childhood belief in the strength of Canada." He said this country has an abundance of resources which bode well for a promising future.

Bishop, who is a member of the county's "YES to Canada" committee, said he suspects special interest groups are behind the "no" vote arguments. Self interest groups are distrustful of the democratic process of working out the details, he said.

The "YES" committee "are just people," said Bishop. We're not movers or shakers." He said the special interest groups on the "no" side are "daring you and I." He said they want to convince people to vote "no" in order to benefit their own interests.

Devolin argued to the contrary. He notes the make-up of the "no" side bridges all political parties. There are Reformers, Liberals, Conservatives and New Democrats on both sides of the argument, he said.

He also commented on the generated fear of being unpatriotic with a "no" vote. Former Prime Minister Pierre

Trudeau's argument in opposition to the accord is proof of this, he said.

"Whatever you believe about Trudeau, he had a vision for Canada," said Devolin. His public opposition to the accord demonstrates that it is not anti-Canadian to say no.

Devolin also commented on special rights being granted to groups. "I don't believe we should have different sets of rules for different people." This accord will give special rights to Anglos, French, Quebecois and Aboriginal peoples, he said.

A constitution is supposed to come from the people to outline the manner in which governments work, said Devolin. This accord was designed by governments and put to the people for a non-binding vote.

"Somehow this has all been turned upside down," Devolin contends, and the result is an accord that favours governments. He said the notwithstanding clause allows individual governments to opt out of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms.

Camp Allsaw owner wins Lieutenant Governor's conservation award

The founder of Camp Allsaw, Sam Hambly, has won the Lieutenant Governor's Conservation Award.

The honour is given to one individual and one corporation annually to recognize outstanding contributions to the environment. Hambly won based on his lifetime devotion to conservation.

Hambly invented the first and only insulated composter for which he won a Recycling Council of Ontario award in 1991. He is currently adapting it to be a "hot-bed" for plant germination.

In an interview with The Times in September, Hambly said the conservation award was more important to him than the Recycling Council award.

"It was nice to be recognized, but they're concerned with recycling for reducing garbage. I'm interested in recycling to maintain the quality of our soil," said Hambly.

Hambly founded Camp Allsaw in 1962, but has also been instrumental in the founding of several other conservation programs including the Toronto Island School and the Grass Roots Outdoor Education Program.

C.P. Hotels and Resorts won in the corporation category.

Peace Grove planted

Minden celebrates Canada's commitment to peace and the environment

by Andy Holloway

Fittingly, the sun shone down on the official opening of Minden's Peace Grove last Thursday afternoon.

Archie Stouffer Elementary School grade four students Chris Graham and Lesley Milbourne, along with some help, placed the final tree into the ground as about 50 people looked on. The tree is a Thornless Honey Locust which was donated by Marg and Tom Prentice to commemorate the Leslie Prentice family who farmed the fields on which the Peace Grove sits.

The Peace Grove, one of hundreds throughout the country, was opened simultaneously with the unveiling of the National Peacekeeping Monument in Ottawa. The parks symbolize Canada's commitment to world peace as well as environmental protection.

"It is just so great that there are so many nice things that you can appreciate, enjoy and do in this world, and so many nice people with whom to share the experience," said Minden Deputy-Reeve Lewis Stevens, one of the key workers behind the project along with parks department head Ivan Ingram and Stan Hill of the museum committee.

Stevens said the 12 trees which make up the Peace Grove represent the 10 provinces and two territories and are as diversified as the people who make up Canada. The trees were donated by the Kinette Club and the Minden Women's Institute along with some reforestation from the parks department.

Stevens said the Peace Grove was created mainly through the hard work and concern of the area's senior citizens and museum committee.

"This legacy of their love for the past, their reverence for this land that for many has shared their hopes, dreams, sorrows and joys will be in the hands of our youth," said Stevens.

Stevens said the Peace Grove may also contain park benches and picnic tables in the future so that everybody can enjoy it.

Your vote does matter

Voting sends messages to government say Devolin, Scott

Regardless of which side of the argument you are on, it is important to participate in the October 26 constitutional referendum.

This was the message coming from all four participants in last Thursday's debate at Haliburton Highlands Secondary School.

The participants were asked to respond to a suggestion that voting in this referendum is pointless, since the results are non-binding.

"I'm here tonight to decide, not on how I will vote, but on whether I will vote at all," Sheila Zimon said during the forum's question period. She said this exercise is a "farce", since the federal government is apt to ignore the wishes of the people.

Munroe Scott, a writer and political analyst, responded first. "We have to be hard headed about this," he said. "This whole thing is the result of a megalomaniac Prime Minister who wants his name in history."

However, Scott said an overwhelming no vote can make a difference. A yes vote will bring about the adoption of the Charlottetown Accord, said Scott. A mediocre no vote will probably have the same result, he added.

However, Brian Mulroney will find it difficult to disregard a convincing no vote, he said.

Kinmount writer and historian Guy Scott was taken aback by Zimon's comments. The main objection to the Meech Lake Accord was the lack of public consultation, he said. Now that the government is asking for a consensus, people see this as a bad thing, he added.

Barry Devolin, who is the Reform candidate for this riding, said a no vote tells the government it has no mandate to deal with this issue. When the politicians involved in this accord wake up on October 27 to a no vote, Devolin said they are apt to readjust their sights to the next issue - a federal election in the spring.

Devolin predicts the constitution will not be a factor in the election. Political parties will concentrate on the issue of most importance to the voters, and that is the economy.

"The economy is what people are interested in," Devolin said to a rousing round of applause, "not the constitution."

Staying away from the polls does nothing to voice objection to the process, said Munroe Scott. Instead of boycotting, a protest vote can be registered by going to the polls and refusing the ballot, he said. This at least counts into the statistics.

Being aware of what you read

Be aware of what you are reading when you receive "Your Guide to Canada's Proposed Constitutional Changes" in the mail, says Barry Devolin.

Households throughout the province received copies of the consensus report on the constitution in their mail boxes last week. However, the full text of the agreement is wrapped in a separate, upbeat report of the federal government's interpretation of the accord.

On several occasions during last Thursday's referendum debate in Haliburton, Devolin urged people to read the consensus report and trash the cover.

"This," he said waving the consensus report in one hand and the government literature in the other, "is more valuable than this."

The government's interpretation of the accord is the full-colour brochure which accompanies the accord. The consensus report is the black-and-white text stapled to the inside.

Sides disagree over the effect of a 'no' vote

The ramifications of a "no" vote in the October 12 referendum will depend on how the world interprets the results, says David Bishop.

Bishop, who represented the "YES to Canada" committee at last Thursday's public debate in Haliburton, said he is afraid of potential consequences should Canadians vote against the Charlottetown Accord.

"There will be so many opinions on what it means that I'm afraid to think about it," he said in response to a question from Jim McKee. "I hope it would not be the break up of Canada."

Bishop, a Haliburton lawyer, said the consequences will depend on how Canadians and their trading partners interpret the results. Separatists and other special interest groups within Canada would likely see this as a victory for their cause, he said. Canada's trading partners could view it as a sign of disunity, which may result in their reluctance to invest in Canada.

The other three participants in Thursday's forum were not asked to respond to this question. However, Barry Devolin addressed the issue in his opening remarks.

"We have a constitution in Canada," said Devolin. "It's not perfect, but if we vote no, the country will not fall apart."

YES'Do You Agree?'*NO

On October 26, Canadians will be asked to vote on the proposal for constitutional renewal, known as the Charlottetown Accord. The question to be posed in this non-binding referendum is: "Do you agree that the Constitution of Canada should be renewed on the basis of the agreement reached on August 28, 1992?" In an attempt to help you understand the implications of this decision, The Times has called on two area spokespersons to present their arguments on the issue.

by Harry Davis

The Haliburton County "Yes to Canada" committee is a non-partisan group of citizens who share the common belief that a strong "yes" vote means; a promising, certain future for our young people; the acceptance of a good compromise that has been worked out with intelligence and honour; good news for the economy, and an affirmation of the values and the diversity of our country.

This proposal for constitutional renewal was unanimously agreed upon by all of our Provincial Premiers, all of our federal and territorial leaders and our Aboriginal leaders.

Agreement holds promise for future

Harry Davis is the chairman of Haliburton County's 'YES to Canada' Committee. He is also a former reeve of Stanhope Township and county warden.

I support the Charlottetown accord, not because I would defend any or every clause, but because it promises me and my children and grandchildren a future. For years we had two great families of people living in harmony. Today Canada has many more than just these two families which were recognized in 1867. The Charlottetown accord struggles, however imperfectly, to recognize this new, more complete and open-minded Canada by giving a place to the original Canadians and the newest. With great respect, the "no" side seems to me too narrow to embrace my sense of Canada.

We must, as a people, stand shoulder to shoulder in a new era of peace, stability, growth, prosperity and progress and refuse to permit, by indifference or indecision, the bell to signal the coming of a new age of darkness in Canada. Unless we turn our backs on divisiveness, bigotry, intolerance and a downward spiral of decline, we could be swept into troubled waters. I wish we could erase all feelings of negativity in our citizens and encourage everyone to mark their ballot with an emphatic "yes" on October 26.

A short time ago when the United Nations rated all countries of the world they voted Canada as the best place to live. A "yes" vote will send a message to the world that we are united and strong - a good country in which to invest. The success of the agreement will end uncertainty about Canada's economic future and help prevent the creation of any new barriers to interprovincial trade.

The Canada Clause identifies us as a people. It entrenches in the constitution our basic values, and recognizes that we are a diverse nation unlike any other in the world. It ensures racial and ethnic equality, the equality of men and women, the equality of provinces and protects minority language rights. The agreement recognizes three fundamentals for Canadians:

- (1) Equality of provinces through an equal elected and more effective Senate;
- (2) The equality of all citizens through a House of Commons that better reflects representation by population and,
- (3) The equality of the two founding languages of Canada.

The August 28 agreement is good for Canada and good for Ontario. Our province will get 18 more seats in the House of Commons; and will have the same number of Senate seats as the other provinces. Governments will be more efficient. There will be less costly overlap of services in Ontario. It highlights our tradition of compromise, tolerance and respect. The new Canada Clause will confirm the shared values of Canadians such as equality of race, religion and gender and the protection of minority language rights.

The Edmonton Journal of September 3, 1992, writes, "Most Canadians inside and outside of Quebec see the country, not any single province, as the big winner in the constitutional deal, a new poll suggests."

On August 25, 1992, the Kitchener-Waterloo Record wrote that, "If the agreement is ratified, Canada will survive as a nation and Canadians will continue to live in one of the best countries on the planet."

On the same date, we quote from the Saskatoon Star Phoenix, "We need to broaden our sights and ask what's in this agreement for the whole country. The question then becomes the answer: What's in the deal is a country - strong, peaceful and united - for all of us."

Those are just a few of the many testimonials from across our great land. The National Canada Committee is made up of Canadians from all walks of life. People like Ed Broadbent (former N.D.P. leader), Bill Davis

by Barry Devolin

"Do you agree that the Constitution of Canada should be renewed on the basis of the agreement reached on August 28, 1992?"

As a loyal Canadian with serious concerns about our future together, I will vote NO on October 26. Not NO to Canada. Not NO to Quebec. I intend to vote NO to the constitutional future the Charlottetown Accord will surely create. I firmly believe that NO is the appropriate and deserving response to the question asked. My opposition to the Charlottetown Accord goes beyond my involvement with the Reform Party of Canada.

Voting 'no' is not a vote against Canada

Barry Devolin is the Reform Party candidate for the Victoria-Haliburton riding.

It is neither partisan nor provincial. It's not based on some notion that "we didn't get enough" or "they got too much". It is more fundamental and philosophical than that. I believe that the acceptance of this Accord will move Canada toward an unfortunate future.

In this article, I will explain why I am voting NO. My purpose is not to convert you. Nor is it to bully you into agreeing with me. I merely wish to make my case. I am grateful for this opportunity to present my views and I hope that you will consider them before making your own decision.

Constitutions are agreements struck between citizens of a democratic state to establish limits on the governments they create for themselves. For this reason, constitutions ought to be established by and ultimately accepted, rejected or amended by the people, not their governments.

The present system of constitutional reform in Canada does not involve individual Canadians, it involves Canadian governments. For this reason, it is not surprising that these negotiations more closely resemble a tug-of-war for provincial gain rather than true nation building. As an example of this, listen to the participants as they describe how they "got a lot" or "didn't get enough" for their province. Who, in this process, is looking out for Canada and Canadians?

I believe that nation building in Canada did not start and end in 1867. It is an ongoing process with long-term implications and repercussions. As Canadian citizens we must demand a role in this important process and we must be prepared to participate. For this reason, I am very pleased to take an active role in the referendum campaign. It is our chance as individual citizens to help shape Canada's future. We should take full advantage.

Canada is presently caught in a cross-current of two trends sweeping the globe. The first is economic in nature. Trade barriers are coming down worldwide and economic integration is an international fact of life. At the same time as national economies grow more interdependent, however, the tide of cultural tribalism is also rampant. All over the world, distinct cultural groups within larger states are demanding independent nation status and cultural sovereignty. Examples include the former Soviet Union, Yugoslavia, Spain and Canada.

Therefore the question arises, is it possible to evolve a state so that the reality of economic interdependence can be combined with the internal demands for more cultural sovereignty? I believe that this is the true challenge facing Canada today. Can we create a national government strong enough to manage the economy while giving Quebec and other provinces sufficient cultural autonomy?

I believe that these seemingly contradictory goals can be reconciled and that Canada can remain united and viable into the 21st Century. This reconciliation will not result, however, from the present process of constitutional reform through First Ministers' Conferences. It can only occur if a national political leader or party will put forth a vision for Canada's future which meets the needs of all Canadians, and then works to develop support for that vision.

Such a constitution should include the following elements.

- 1) That all citizens of Canada are equal before the law and that the constitution shall make no special provisions which create different classes of citizens.
- 2) That Canada is a federation of provinces and territories, not founding nations or ethnic/linguistic groups.
- 3) That the federal government shall have sufficient authority to create a truly common market within Canada and to negotiate more liberal trade abroad.
- 4) That the federal government must consider the availability of economic resources

Charlottetown Accord a short-term solution

Editor:

So a 'Yes' committee has been formed in Haliburton County. Well they are going to have to work hard to convert me. This is one county resident, who barring any evidence to the contrary, plans to vote 'No' in the upcoming referendum. This has not been a decision lightly reached believe me, and who knows but that I may yet change my mind. However, based on the evidence to date, it's a 'No' vote for me.

No, I am not a disloyal Canadian or an 'enemy' of Canada as our esteemed prime minister once called (later retracted) any person prepared to vote 'No'. It is precisely because I do love this country that I am prepared to risk censure in openly declaring my choice. I consider the Charlottetown accord a short-term solution at best, and one that is not in the best long-term interests of this country. It may satisfy the end of bringing Quebec into the Constitution - its raison d'être remember, the rest of the country agreed to it some years back - but one has to ask if that would be the end of it. Premier Robert Bourassa, on returning from Charlottetown openly tried to sell the accord to his province, if I am to believe the media, as only a beginning for Quebec.

We are however, it seems to this observer, being given a series of smoke screens that appear to be designed to make us forget the real issue and the genesis of this constitutional round. We are told that to vote 'No' is to tell native Canadians we don't give a damn about their very legitimate concerns, that horrendous economic woes will strike us both domestically and internationally, that our economic agenda will be sidelined AGAIN while we try to come up with a new agenda, that we are sending signals to other countries that we have not managed to 'get our act together' as a country and, finally, that to vote 'No' is in the final analysis to say that we want to break up Canada.

Are we then saying, that if we vote 'No', we will forever, and irrevocably, refuse to deal with native concerns; that we will immediately put all other legitimate issues on the back burner while we try once more to come up with a solution that will satisfy Quebec and meanwhile bring a whole new set of special interest groups out of the closet; that we have doomed ourselves both domestically and internationally to both economic woes and patriotic shame? I think not.

I would be the last to say that a 'No' vote will not immediately affect us as far as foreign markets are concerned. Any political instability whatsoever has an immediate effect on investment. Who in their right mind would want to invest in a country where one's investments might be subject to the possible political break-up of that country. So for the doomsday sayers, I will agree that a 'No' vote will immediately subject us to an economic crisis. Is this, however, an excuse to give in to what is in effect blackmail on the part of the federal government? Play it our way or else? I can not look into Brian Mulroney's soul to see his motives, but I have my doubts that his own personal aggrandizement does not play a decided role in this high stakes poker game. Jean Chretien and Audrey McLaughlin's motives are open to scrutiny too, as are those of Pierre Trudeau who stands accused of trying to maintain his place in the history books by opposing the accord. Maybe he is, but his recent article in Maclean's makes more sense to this reader than anything I have read of late in this area, and I would challenge anyone to read it before deciding on their vote. He feels, as a Quebecker, that the governments there since Lesage, have been blackmailing the rest of the country with more and more demands as a condition for their continued role within Canada. Perhaps only a Quebecker of his stature can say this given the political climate of these times. As thinking Canadians, surely the issue has never been 'Is Quebec a distinct society?' but rather 'What is the financial cost to the rest of the country of maintaining that distinctive society and who is to determine how that distinctiveness should be preserved? Is becoming the only potentially unilingual province in Canada the answer, for example?'

Perhaps we should also be looking at British Columbia's legitimate concerns for the future. In designing the federal government to meet the current needs of Ontario and Quebec, are we perhaps subverting the future needs of the West, particularly considering the incredible emergence of the Pacific Rim countries, most notably the sleeping giant China. It would make sense, long term, that given the proposed labour legislation of the Bob Rae government with the perturbation it appears to be evoking in the hearts of Pacific Rim businessmen, as well as the natural geographic advantages of B.C vis a vis the Pacific Rim, that a political balance of power could well swing their way. Does this accord address that possible exigency?

Maybe then we, as Canadians, should say 'No', take our short-term economic woes and prove to the rest of the world we are not open to ransom either from within or without. Perhaps our attitude to the Quebec government, which seems to fail to perceive that we are moving into global, not parochial times, should be that of Helmut Kohl of Germany and Francois Mitterand of France who appear to be saying to British Prime Minister John Major, apparently reluctant to espouse closer economic ties with Europe by endorsing the Maastricht Treaty, 'We'll just move ahead without you.' Sure Canada stands to lose a lot should Quebec opt to leave us, but Quebec stands to lose as much, if not more. Let us not be subject to any more blackmail.

One last thought; the referendum is still some time away and I do have an open mind, so all you Haliburton County 'Yes' advocates out there are welcome to attempt to persuade me of the wrongness of my position.

Patricia M. Gibson

Blindly rushing into constitution nightmare

Editor:

The First Ministers of Canada are rushing us headlong into Constitutional changes that will succeed in tying this country into continued divisive controversy for the rest of history. The unfinished, extremely flawed agreement if not yet complete, either in the legal text or in the actual negotiations. Yet we are being told that we must vote "blindly" to "get it off the table". The negotiations will remain ongoing despite what we are told but the framework will have been established that will be impossibly restrictive.

The people of Canada are being shamed into voting "yes". We are being told to "hold your nose" so the country will remain united. This is not a vote for Quebec independence. If we vote "no" we are not rejecting that province, or any other group.

The politicians are practising the most abhorrent form of blackmail that has ever been conceived and wrapping it in the flag. The dollar is falling on world markets. Is it any wonder that we see a near-hysterical Prime Minister pulling off the theatrics we have seen recently and loudly decrying the imminent fall of our nation? One is forced to ask, "Just who is the enemy of Canada?" We are being told we must trust the Prime Minister and his government. The same government that brought about the present made-in-Canada depression; that so badly misjudged the fishing quotas on both coasts; that has built up a $400 billion plus debt; that is still unable to balance its budget even with the GST. One could go on and on.

Our provincial Government fares no better. This government has succeeded in discouraging investment by introducing questionable labour legislation; attempted to spend its way out of the depression and only succeeded in loading a terrible debt on the shoulders of Ontario taxpayers; is attempting to emasculate our police forces. And on and on! These are but a few reasons why one would question the advisability of giving them a blank cheque on the future of Canada.

To bring up just a few items mentioned in the agreement: We understand that Quebec will be guaranteed 25 percent of the total seats in the House of Commons forever and ever, regardless of their population. As other provinces grow, and rightfully receive additional seats based on the increase of their population, Quebec will automatically benefit as well. Equally unfair and undemocratic are the 18 seats given to Ontario as a "singing bonus".

This writer always assumed that ours was a democracy - that representation by population was a fundamental right to be jealously guarded.

We understand that all changes to the legislation on French language and culture must be approved by the Francophone Senators. If and when a separatist government is elected in Quebec, the senators they appoint will be separatists, and will hold veto power over all linguistic and cultural legislation for all of Canada.

Agreement could not be reached on many subjects during the negotiations. In particular, the Provincial trade barriers which supposedly would benefit our economy. If the First Ministers were unable to agree before the agreement, how can they expect to achieve positive results when such a restrictive framework will have been put in place, together with over all vetoes?

Those of us who dare to disagree with this agreement or have the temerity to object to having the decision taken out of our hands, are being branded as "enemies of Canada". We are being told that Canada will somehow disappear or collapse if the agreement is not passed. I have more faith in my country. Canada will continue to flourish and grow with all those who wish to remain a part, including the great province of Quebec.

My vote will be a resounding "no" to this undemocratic agreement.

Vote with your head

Separating content from emotion is a challenge we must overcome before voting in the October 26 referendum. We must be able to sift through the emotional baggage that parties from both sides of this argument are unloading on us and get down to the black-and-white facts.

Let's have a look at some of the emotions:

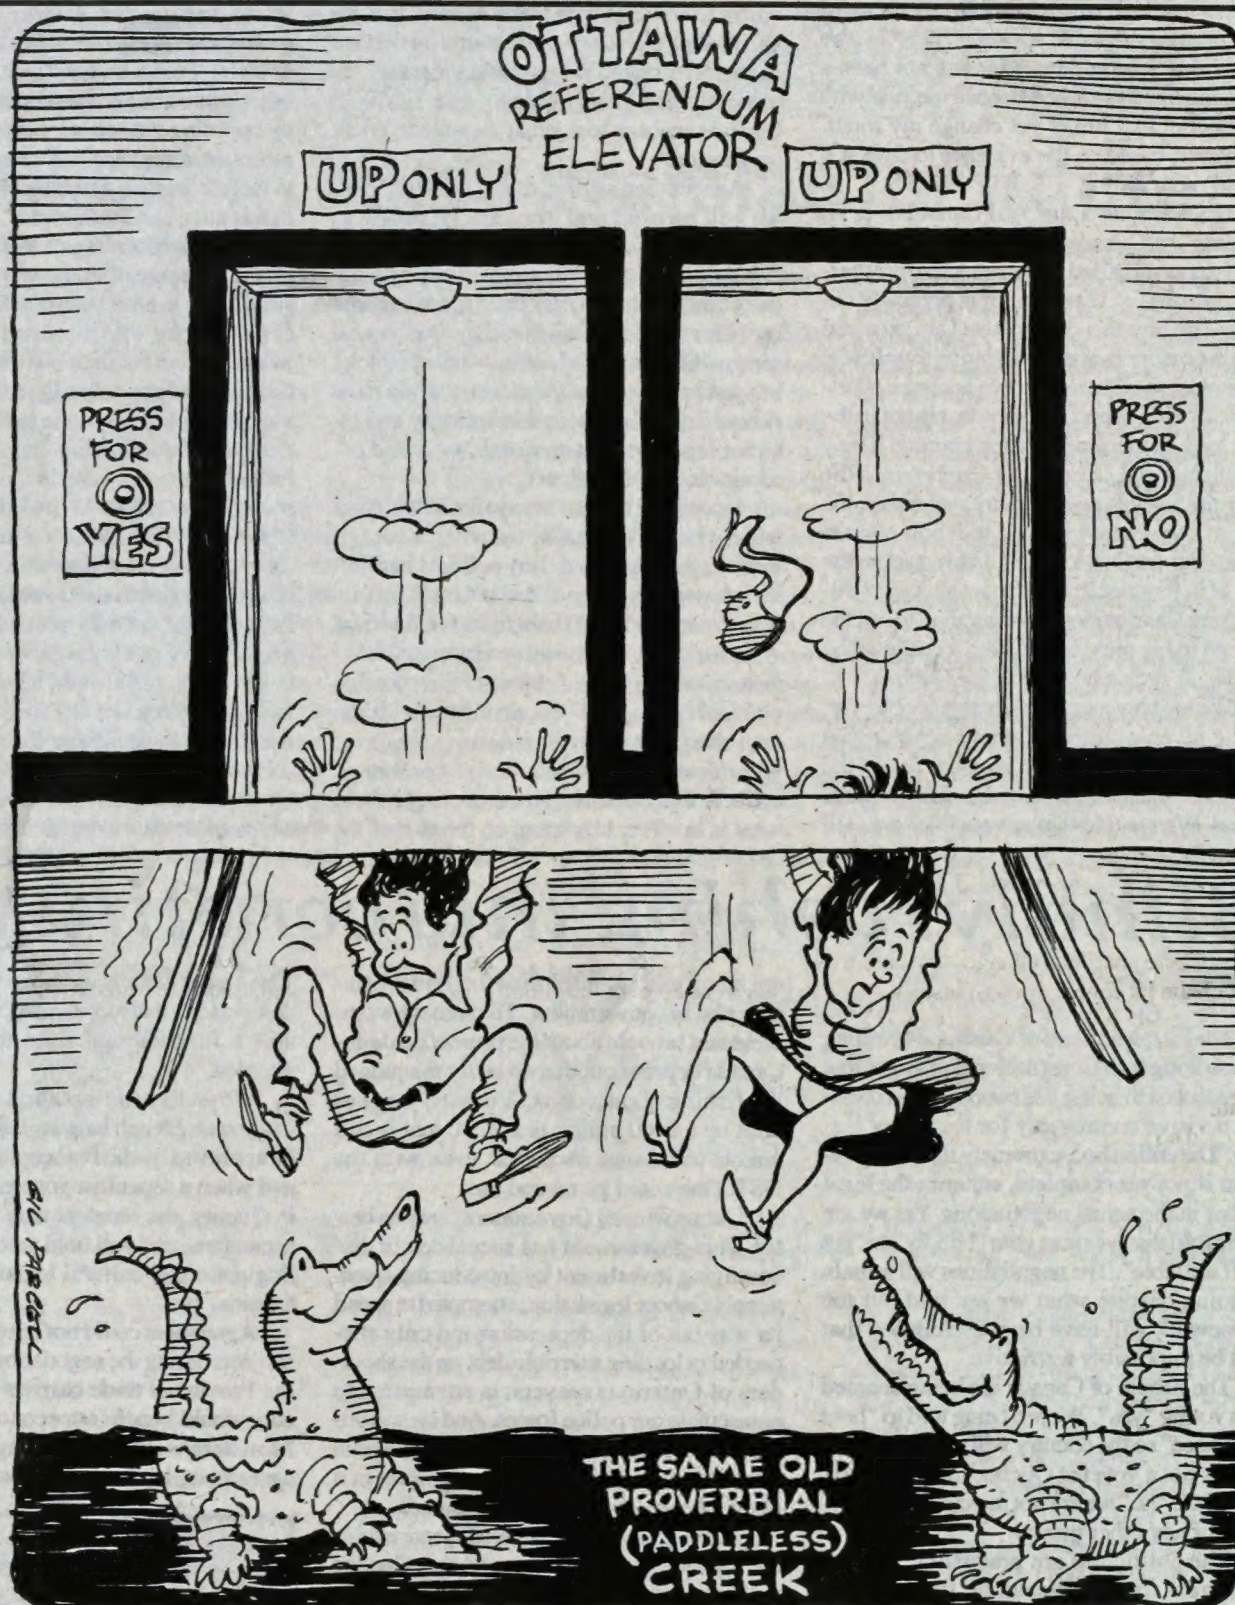

Revenge: This referendum is not about Brian Mulroney. We realize he is despised by Canadians from coast to coast and a rejection of this accord would serve as a nice slap in the face. However, displeasure with the Prime Minister is not the issue. Next spring's federal election is the time to pay Mulroney his dues.

Pride: This is not an issue of nationalism. People who vote in this referendum can take pride in the fact they are participating in a democratic process. How you vote is not a reflection of your love for this nation.

Fear: Canada will not crumble in the wake of a no vote. This country has prospered as a nation with its current, albeit imperfect, constitution. We are confident it will continue to thrive regardless of the outcome of the referendum. The fear of Quebec splitting away from the rest of Canada will not come as a result of a no vote. Nor will a yes vote solve all of Quebec's troubles.

Undoubtedly, there will be economic consequences to a no vote - Mulroney has made certain of this. However, we believe these will not be lasting consequences . . . the revised constitution, on the other hand, will have a lasting effect on Canada.

Ironically, participants from both sides of the argument in last Thursday's debate in Haliburton urged us to look to the future of this nation; to consider the welfare of our children and grandchildren. This can only be accomplished when we are aware of what the proposed revisions say and mean. Only then can we vote with our heads and not our hearts.

Commuting to city has hefty price tag

This morning I left my house in the country at 6:30 so that I could catch a bus that drove due east for two hours and ultimately dumped me in the bowels of the Big City where I make my way to my office, my desk and my telephone. As soon as I got to my telephone I called Harry.

Harry and I had a 10 o'clock meeting, but Harry wasn't in yet. His secretary figured he was caught in traffic somewhere between his office (just down the hall from mine) and his home, which is in a small town about as far east of the city as mine is west.

I hung up and pondered the absurdity of the situation. Here were two worker drones, Harry and Yours Truly, dutifully plodding towards the big smoke from opposite directions at the crack of dawn through traffic jams, exhaust fumes and various vignettes of vehicular mayhem....just so we could sit down across a desk and talk business.

To quote an old wartime slogan: Was This Trip Really Necessary? Why didn't we both stay home in our pajamas and do our business long distance?

Well, because Harry and I are commuters, that's why. We belong to that loony benighted stratum of citizens who earn their paycheques in the city but lay their heads in the boonies. There are dozens of good reason for commuting to work — cheaper accommodation, clean air, the sight of actual wildlife other than cockroaches and sewer rats — but commuting comes with a hefty price tag: twice a day you have to gird up your seat belt, check your vital fluids (gas, oil, windshield washer), take a death grip on the steering wheel and Make The Trip.

But do we have to? Everyday that I drive into the city I see literally hundreds upon hundreds of cars doing the same thing mine is — chugging down the road to and from the city in pathetic chrome-to-chrome daisy chains that stretch over the horizon in both directions.

And for what? Oh sure, some commuters have jobs that absolutely require them to bring themselves physically into the city each day, but some of us — in fact, probably most of

Looking for info on old Minden fire pumper

Editor:

It was a boyhood dream realized when our son Michael Stamp became the owner of what was once Minden's fire pumper - 1937 vintage.

As a boy he had many a ride on the old red fire truck when it was being used as an amusement at Hospitality Inn Resort, South Lake.

The fire truck held a deep fascination for Michael. He often talked of having it for his own, of course we thought that was all there was to it - just talk.

However, the years passed and he eventually started taking his own family on vacation with him to Hospitality Inn, but unfortunately by then, the old fire pumper had been damaged by fire and neglect.

In 1988 the aged truck was pushed or towed into a thickly wooded area of the resort and for the next three years left to rust, becoming home to a number of animals, birds and insects.

For three years Michael kept an eye on the truck. Finally the owners, Al and Denise LeBlanc, of Hospitality Inn could see that Michael really had a soft spot for the big, rusting hulk and they informed him he could take it away if he wanted it.

Michael was happy and excited so in August 1991 the old red pumper was moved piece by piece to its new home in Scarborough, Ontario, where Michael could set to work on its restoration.

By September this year most of the important work of repairing and repainting had been completed. The fire truck was cleaned up and now operational.

Of course there are still a few more things to be done, and these will be carried out over the winter months and by late spring or mid June 1993 we hope to have the old red fire pumper ready to roll along for another fifty-six years.

At the moment we are trying to piece together a history of Minden's fire pumper. We know it was in service for a number of years before going to Hospitality Inn, but we would like to know where it started out. Someone mentioned Richmond Hill, however we were wondering and would most certainly appreciate any history you have.

ciate any history you have.

We know it has been in a number of parades and news write-ups over the years and there are probably some old photographs around somewhere.

We're hoping you can help us bring this beautiful old fire truck to life again and we look forward to hearing from you or any of your readers that remember it.

Many thanks.

Michael and Gordon Stamp

Accord is part of Canada's changing history

There are many changes to a nation as it charts its course through history.

Canada became a country in 1867 by the Confederation Act. In 1931, the country went through another renewal - the Statute of Westminster decreed that Britain could no longer control Canadian Law, and in 1982, our constitution was brought home to Canada from England.

A constitution must be a living document. This means from time to time we re-examine it to see if it continues to reflect our people and our society.

Canada is a very different nation than the one created in 1867, and continues to evolve. Our constitution must evolve with us. Constitutional renewal will be an on-going process for our nation. Right now, we are presented with another chance - yet another step - in that on-going process of constitutional renewal.

The Charlottetown Accord was negotiated after many meetings by the federal government, all 10 provincial premiers, the two territorial leaders and the aboriginal leaders of Canada. As well, there was input and discussion from women's groups, ethnic groups, community groups and individuals from all over the country.

I chaired the Select Committee on Ontario in Confederation. As chair, I travelled the province seeking input from many sources on just what the ordinary people and the various groups wanted in constitutional reform.

Many of the proposals put forth in the Charlottetown Accord are a result of this kind of consultation and discussion. Other provinces mounted their own process for constitutional renewal and the federal government took its own committee across the country. I was Ontario's representative at constitutional meetings in Montreal, Halifax, Calgary and Vancouver, and we came out with discussion papers and reports to the legislature and the people of Ontario.

The Charlottetown Accord is a balanced package, dealing with concerns from across Canada. Some of those concerns are answered with a new Senate, Aboriginal self-government and the Social Charter. It is the result of two years of discussion, negotiation, understanding and compromise. It does not cancel out our Charter of Rights and Freedoms, but will exist in harmony along side it.

Yet there is a lot of misunderstanding about the Accord. I hope to be able to clear up some of your questions by talking about the Social Charter, the Elected Senate, Changes to Federal/Provincial powers and the Canada Clause.

Let me start with the Canada Clause. This outlines the fundamental characteristics of Canada including: equality of men and women; racial and ethnic equality; official language minority communities.

Quebec as a distinct society - not better, merely distinct. This recognizes Quebec's history as one of the building blocks of our nation. The Canada Clause also states that each province has diverse characteristics. In other words, Canada is the sum of many distinct parts that have come together. The Canada Clause says: "Canadians are committed to a respect for individual and collective human rights and freedoms for all people."

Aboriginal self-government - Aboriginal governments would enact and enforce their own laws. But these laws must also conform with Canadian law. As well, aboriginal governments would be subject to the Charter of Rights and Freedoms. The Accord does not grant any new rights to land, but it does recognize existing treaty rights.

A report from Queen's Park

With Dennis Drainville, MPP

I will elaborate on the remaining subjects in my next report in this newspaper.

Until then let me close by saying that I urge all my constituents to read the Charlottetown Accord, and to attend the meetings and debates in their area.

I will be involved in public meetings on the Accord and I will be supporting the yes side. I am willing to discuss my views on the Accord with constituents at the meetings.

Any one with any questions or concerns on the Charlottetown Accord can direct them to my Lindsay office at: 1-800-461-7672 or 324-6654.

us — are making the tiresome, smelly, dangerous and expensive trip to town to do something that we could just as well accomplish at home.

Let's face it: most of us salaried stiff don't earn our daily bread by being hewers of wood or drawers of water any more. Most of us these days — be we inventory clerks or managing editors — are pushers of paper or wranglers of electrons. Our secret weapons are the telephone, the personal computer and the fax machine.

And phones, PCs and faxes work just as well out behind the barn as they do in a skyscraper at Bay and King.

What would happen if all the commuters who could do their job from home, didn't go to the office tomorrow? The savings would be astronomical. In Britain, a report called Strategic Workstyles 2000 has just been published. It claims that if British commuters worked from their homes Britain would save more than $5 billion in fuel costs and have 9,000 fewer road accidents to contend with.

It's starting to happen over here. Last month, the president of the Treasury Board announced a pilot project that will allow employees of the federal government the option of working from their homes, lined to their offices be telephones and computers.

"It can improve many aspects of life for Canadians" said Treasury Board president Gilles Loiselle. "It can be good for family life, reduce environmental damage and encourage energy conservation."

He may be right. Unfortunately, I can't think about it any more. Too tired. I have to get to bed so I can get up early tomorrow and leave the house at 6:30 to catch a bus that will drive...

Bypass speed limit drops

Highway 35 limit is down to 70 km/h on Minden stretch

The speed limit on Highway 35 in Minden will be dropped to 70 km per hour.

In response to safety concerns expressed by Minden Council, the Ministry of Transportation has decided to slow the traffic by reducing the speed limit from the present 80 km per hour.

Council was informed of the decision in a letter from the ministry which was discussed at last Thursday's meeting. Although the reduced limit will improve the situation on the highway, Reeve Bern Berry said he would still like to see other steps taken.

Initially, council had called on the ministry to install caution lights on the by-pass. The ministry, however, has said warning lights are not warranted at this time.

Berry said he hopes the ministry will consider this option again in the future. The reduced speed limit "is not enough, but it's a start," said Berry.

The limits of the proposed reduced speed zone will extend from 400 metres south of Lutterworth Boundary Road northerly to 60 metres north of Horse-shoe Lake Road 1.

Council passed a resolution endorsing the proposal, which will allow the ministry to process the necessary regulations.

On a related matter, Councillor Grant Plooard noted that the intersection of Highway 35 and South Lake Road is a problem area.

Drivers entering the highway from South Lake Road have difficulty seeing southbound traffic without pulling out into the intersection, he said. The problem, he said, is that location of the highway signs impairs drivers' view to the north. He suggested the ministry should be made aware of this situation.

Buying Or Selling A Used Vehicle? Here's What You Must Know.

Starting October 1, 1992, the Ontario retail sales tax you pay when you privately buy a used car, van or light truck, will be based on the purchase price or the average wholesale value, whichever is more. The average wholesale value is set using the Canadian Red Book, a well-known standard in the used vehicle business.

The tax is paid when you change the vehicle ownership at your local Driver and Vehicle Licence Issuing Office.

Some changes in ownership, such as gifts between certain family members, are tax-free with legal proof.

Starting April 1, 1993, if you want to sell your vehicle privately, you will have to buy a vehicle transfer package and give it to the buyer before the sale is completed. The package will be available at all Driver and Vehicle Licence Issuing Offices and from the Ministry of Consumer and Commercial Relations. Consumers will benefit from information on the vehicle's history, outstanding debts on the vehicle and retail sales tax.

If you're planning to buy or sell a used vehicle privately and would like more information, call 1-800-263-7965. Telephone Device for the Deaf, call 1-800-263-7776.

Reform candidate gives 16 reasons to say 'No'

before establishing a priority list of social commitments.

5) That economic policy not be made without consideration of its environmental impact. Also, that environmental policy not be made without consideration of its economic impact.

6) That the right to own and enjoy private property, and the right to enter contracts is constitutionally respected.

7) That the federal government must get out of the culture business, leaving culture and its cost to individuals, groups and lower levels of government.

8) That the Constitution of Canada is the property of the people, and not the governments it has created.

I believe that a constitutional future based on these principles would work for Canada. After the defeat of the Charlottetown Accord, we should work to establish non-partisan Constituent Assemblies of respected citizens who hold no political office to develop an agenda for Canada based on the above principles. Also based on the above, here are...

EIGHT GOOD REASONS FOR VOTING "NO"

1) This accord will create different classes of citizens within Canada. It does not respect the principle of equality for all citizens before the law.

2) This Accord does not treat all provinces equally. Quebec still gets a special deal. It is based on the "two founding nations" concept of Canada and, in addition, it further separates the First Nations from the mainstream.

3) There is no commitment to a Canadian common market. All this agreement states is that a future First Ministers' Conference will be held to deal on this matter.

4) The Social Charter, promoted by Premier Rae, entrenches substantial financial commitments for the federal government, but there are no explicit provisions for the necessary funds to accompany these commitments.

5) There is no acknowledgment that many environmental issues know no provincial boundaries and are therefore more national, or even international in scope. For this reason, the federal government must be involved in the interaction between environmental and economic policies.

6) There is no provision for governments to respect the right of citizens to own and enjoy private property. The right to legal contract, and essential element for investment, is also missing.

7) This Accord further entrenches the federal government as the guardian of the French fact in Canada. Through the Canada Clause and the Social and Economic Charter, it also further involves the federal government in culturally related jurisdictions.

8) There is not provision for any public participation in the inevitable future negotiations and amendment process. This is clearly a constitution for the benefit of governments and not individual citizens.

I believe that these "Eight Reasons to Vote NO" should be sufficient to reject the Charlottetown Accord. If, however, you remain unconvinced, here are...

EIGHT MORE GOOD REASONS TO VOTE "NO"

1) A "YES" vote will not end the constitutional wrangling we have all grown so tired of. In fact, this Accord specifies 60 areas for further negotiation if it is accepted on October 26.

2) A "YES" vote will not guarantee any quick resolution to the economic crises and recession facing Canada today. In fact, this deal will severely limit the federal government's ability to resolve our national economic problems.

3) The referendum offers a "loaded" question to voters.

Experts agree that the neutral question would be "Do you agree or disagree" rather than the "Do you agree" question to which we must answer YES or NO. Ottawa is clearly playing on people's fears and their desire to say YES to Canada.

4) The timetable for this important referendum process has been hurried needlessly. Why should the agenda of one province be allowed to rush the entire country into a hasty decision on a matter of this importance.

5) This deal was made by governments for governments. The rights of individual citizens were obviously not of primary importance. For example, even the Charter of Rights and Freedoms applies only to individuals, as governments may exempt themselves.

6) The amending formula, particularly with regard to institutions, is too rigid and therefore future amendment will be very difficult, if not impossible.

7) There really isn't any "deal" here. This Consensus Report is merely a framework for future negotiations. In fact, there wasn't even a piece of paper in Charlottetown for the First Ministers' to sign.

8) This "Consensus Report" is not unanimous. The Report itself states clearly that "In areas where the consensus was not unanimous, some participants chose to have their dissents recorded. When requested, these dissents have been recorded in the chronological records of the meetings but are not recorded in this summary document." (pg. ii) Are we to believe that none of this dissent is substantial?

I truly believe that accepting the Charlottetown Accord is not in the best interest of Canada. It is clearly a "bad deal". I hope that this description of my views will be useful for you in making up your own mind. Please, do not allow yourself to be bullied.

'Yes' vote confirms belief in a strong Canada

(former Ontario Premier), Marc Garneau (astronaut), Allan MacDonald (Canadian Teachers' Federation), June Callwood (Ontario journalist), Iona Campagnola (B.C.'s consultant and educator), Yves Fortier (Quebec lawyer), the Most Reverend Ted Scott (former Primate of the Anglican church in Canada), Robert Stanfield (former national P.C. leader), plus dozens of business leaders from all across Canada.

The President and CEO of Nova Corporation, spoke about the economic consequences of a "yes" vote. "When you look at the economic benefits, a "yes" vote means governments can focus their attention on ideas for economic renewal; a "yes" vote means business and workers can plan together for our economic future; a "yes" vote means investors can put their money into Canadian businesses and help create jobs; and a "yes" vote means an end to getting side-tracked by jurisdictional disputes and a start to getting to the heart of the economic issues facing all of us."

This referendum gives us a chance as Canadians to explore our heritage of generosity and compassion and to build upon it. It's a living example of something many countries of the world could not do: different people, different languages and different cultures living together peacefully and respecting those differences.

Yugoslavia is a prime example of the opposite extreme and on October 26 the whole world will be watching to see if the signal we send out will continue to be as clear and strong as it has been since Confederation.

There are forces out there who would love to see a "no" vote. If we adopt an indifferent and complacent attitude toward such vital issues then we will be clearing the way for a long period of antagonism which will create economic and social problems for years to come.

Let's help make this a resounding victory for the "Yes to Canada" campaign. Let's talk to as many friends, relatives and neighbours as we possibly can before the big day on October 26. The "yes" side is a reaffirmation of our belief in a strong, united Canada.

Doctor conquered rugged land, patients

Agnes Jamieson was a community builder, first woman coroner and a painter

by Andy Holloway

While not from Haliburton County, Dr. Agnes Jamieson probably affected more lives here than any other person.

For 17 years, Jamieson helped countless numbers of people in the county as a doctor, community worker and a friend. However, she is perhaps best known in Minden for her untiring work in establishing an arts centre, which bears her name.

Originally from the Barrie area, Jamieson graduated from the University of Toronto Medical School in 1935. At the time, female doctors were rare and Jamieson, along with the only other woman in the school, vowed not to let the boys beat them. The pair succeeded, finishing first and second in their class - the first of many accomplishments Jamieson would realize in her life.

Two years later, after completing her internship at St. Joseph's hospital in Toronto, Jamieson opened up her first practice in Mimico, Ontario. Soon after, Jamieson fell ill with pleurisy and was ordered to rest at a hospital in Gravenhurst where she met Olga Myles and Sylvia Howard, two nurses with whom she would spend the rest of her life.

During her stay in Gravenhurst, Jamieson decided she wanted to open up another country practice. Jamieson did not come to Minden until 1939 when World War II began. She came to the area to take over the practice of Dr. W.R. Crowe who was leaving for overseas duty.

"She was a country girl herself, she was born and brought up on a farm and when she wanted to go back into practice again she did not want to practice in the city, she wanted a country practice," recalls Howard who is now

Government proclaims October as Women's history month

October has been named Women's History Month by the government of Canada to recognize the contributions of women who influenced this nation's development.

The month of October coincides with the 63rd anniversary of the "Person's Case", a legal and political battle that led to women being officially declared as "persons". Five women fought against long-standing prejudices and laws to finally obtain the ruling.

One of the key players in the "Person's Case", Nellie McLung said at the time, "people must know the past to understand the present and face the future."

Despite the ruling, women have had to break down barriers in their own backyards in an effort to be recognized as people. Often, these achievements have been overlooked because history tends to focus on political, economic and military people and events - an area off limits for most women until this century.

However, women have had an effect not only in the home, but also as workers, volunteers and community leaders.

86-years-old and still active in health care. Last week she was involved in a foot clinic at the seniors home.

"She asked us about it and we said if she could get what she wanted we would go with her because she didn't want to do it herself.

"We came with her, but we made her promise us that when it became too heavy for her she would give it up and not kill herself because we knew it would be hard-going."

And hard going it was. Within five months after taking over the practice, Jamieson had to deal with an epidemic of measles in February. Spread out over 400 square miles, Jamieson and her nurses tended to 74 cases of measles.

The efficiency displayed by the trio dispelled any fears of a woman doctor in the rugged country.

"I haven't heard any complaints yet. In fact, the only comment has been just the opposite," Jamieson told a reporter a few months after she had arrived.

"I've always wanted to be a doctor since I was a small child. Here I do a little bit of everything, including general surgery. We have a Red Cross hospital in Haliburton and when necessary and convenient patients can be taken to the hospital at Lindsay. I must say that I like it here."

In December, 1942, Jamieson was named the first woman coroner in Ontario, an honour then Premier Gordon Goanant said at the time was "logical and proper with the growing importance of women in our social, economic and industrial structure."

When she started her practice in Minden there was not a hospital here. However, Jamieson worked to get Minden its own hospital and she held sales, bingos and a large auction to raise the funds needed to build the hospital.

Jamieson left Minden in 1956 because the load finally got too much for the diminutive physician. Jamieson only stood five feet tall and weighed just 100 pounds. After stops in Smiths Falls and Orillia where she worked with mentally handicapped people, Jamieson and her two loyal nurses returned to Minden to retire in 1972.

Jamieson had actually planned to retire in Victoria, British Columbia and even bought a house there, but finally decided on Minden because of the better weather.

Each of the three women had their own hobbies, and Jamieson's was painting and she worked hard for nearly 10 years to establish an art gallery in Minden. Her fellow workers in honour of her enthusiasm named the art gallery after her.

Howard says during their time in Minden, Jamieson had befriended Highlands painter Andre Lapine. Jamieson and Frank Welch owned several of Lapine's paintings each and when Welch died he left the paintings to the township provided they could find a permanent home for them.

When Jamieson returned to Minden to retire, she found that nothing had been done about Lapine's paintings and they were hanging in several places. Originally valued at $5,000, they were actually worth $50,000 which Howard says gave Jamieson a "pry to get the art gallery built."

Jamieson herself was an accomplished painter and several of her works are hanging in the cultural centre.

Jamieson never started a family of her own. In her day, a woman could be a doctor or a mother, but to do both was next to impossible. Instead, her patients, particularly those she helped deliver, became her adopted family and were given the same love a mother lavishes on her children.

Until the very end, Jamieson could pick out those she had helped deliver into this world and point out which family they belonged to.

In an interview with The Times shortly before her death, Jamieson talked about her ideas on painting, but she could have been talking about her way of life. Jamieson said judgement and discipline were the two key aspects to a successful painting.

"You have to limit yourself to what you're trying to paint. Often I would take on too much and get nowhere; you have to limit what you see and what you use - you have to choose."

Jamieson chose Minden twice in her life and changed many lives in the process.

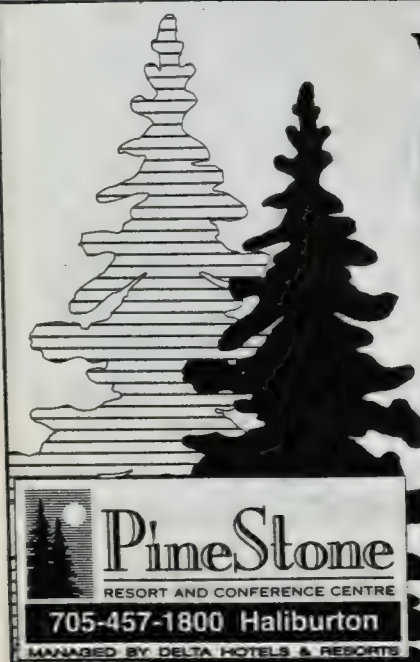

"You have to limit yourself to what you're trying to paint. Often I would take on too much and get nowhere; you have to limit what you see and what you use - you have to choose"

Redmen Soccer

The Haliburton Highlands Redmen take on the Lindsay Collegiate Spartans this Wednesday at the high school. Game time is 2:30 p.m.

Haliburton field hockey team undefeated

HHSS beats Crestwood and ties St. Peter's in double header action

After four league games, the Haliburton Highlands Secondary School field hockey team is still undefeated and in first place in their division.

Last Wednesday Haliburton continued their impressive run with a 1-0 win against Crestwood and a scoreless tie with St. Peter's Saints.

Despite some strong offensive play by Haliburton, they had to settle for a scoreless tie in their first game of the afternoon against the Saints. Haliburton should be happy with a tie with the Saints who are one of the traditional powerhouses in field hockey.

Haliburton kept the Saints pinned in their own end for much of the game and only some stellar saves by the Saint's goalie preserved the game. Bobbi Griffin recorded her third league shut-out in a row for Haliburton, but was not tested too often.

Haliburton had a glorious chance to score the first goal midway through the second half when they were awarded a penalty shot, but the Saint's goalie was up to the task.

In the second game of the afternoon, Haliburton got a goal by Jen Bradford to beat Crestwood 1-0.

Bradford's goal was her third of the season and she has done all of the scoring for Haliburton this year.

So far this season, the field hockey team is holding its own in the Kawartha division. They are undefeated and unscored upon in four league games.

In their first league game on October 1, Haliburton beat Bethany Hills 1-0 backed by a Jen Bradford goal and a shut-out performance by Griffin.

In their second game played that day the Redmen beat Cobourg East, again by a 1-0 score. Bradford scored the lone goal while Griffin earned another shut-out.

The top three teams advance to the Kawartha play-offs and with two games left, Haliburton has an excellent shot at making the cut. The team's final games are on October 22.

And they're off: Haliburton Highlands forward Amy Postliethwaite races upfield with her shadow from the St. Peter's Saints. The two teams were closely matched and the game ended in a scoreless tie.

School football teams nail Spartans

Like the baseball Cincinnati Reds of the 1970s, the Haliburton Highlands Redmen football teams are emerging as the class of the league.

Last Friday, the junior Redmen walloped Lindsay Collegiate 47-0 while the seniors won a close defensive battle 15-0. Both teams are 4-0 and alone in first place in the Kawartha West.

Defence was the name of the game in the senior game as both offences sputtered for much of the first half. In fact, only one point, a single by Jamie Keefer on a missed field goal, was scored.

"Our defence was outstanding. We just played great football, they had chances to score and we just kept shutting them down and shutting them down," said coach Gary Brohman.

In the third quarter, the tide, or rather the wind changed. With the wind at the Spartans back, the Redmen defence held and refused to give ground. Twice the Redmen were pinned deep, but key special team's plays brought them out of trouble. On a kick-off return, Peter Van Leeuwen ran from his own 10 yard line to the Spartan 40 yard line to start the half on the right note for the Redmen.

Later in the quarter, Andy Bacon recovered a fumble on a punt at the Redmen 35 yard line to snuff out a potential Spartan score.

In the fourth quarter the Redmen offence got untracked and scored two touchdowns, both by Bacon. The first was a 45 yard pitch play with some good blocking by Van Leeuwen. The second, with about five minutes left, was set up by a fumble recovery by Jerry Cooper. Bacon capped off the drive with a 20 yard off-tackle run.

The Redmen defence recorded six quarterback sacks (Derek Wilson, Garwood Thomas, Jim Hyde, Chris Greenfield, Greg Brohman and Carl Shatraw), four fumble recoveries (Wilson, Bacon, Cooper and Brett Jackson) and two interceptions (Wilson and Cooper).

"Our only letdown in the game was offensively we had way too many errors. We had

High school soccer teams mauled by Weldon Wildcats

The Haliburton Highlands Redmen soccer teams ran up against some determined opposition in I.E. Weldon and both teams were clawed by the Wildcats.

The senior Redmen lost a 2-1 "heart-breaker" last Wednesday to the Wildcats said coach Walter Tose. In their only previous meeting this year, the Redmen, now 2-1-1 on the season, had destroyed the Wildcats 5-0.

In the first game the Redmen had jumped out to an early lead, this time it was the Wildcats who started quickly. The Redmen fell behind 2-0 before mounting a strong, but ultimately unsuccessful comeback. Ritchie Mills scored off a corner kick to give the Redmen a chance for the tie. Despite some good chances by Nico Haedicke and the two Darrens, Johnston and Parsons, the Redmen could not capitalize. "We had a lot of chances. Eighty per cent of the play was in their end, but we couldn't get the tying goal," said Tose.

The Wildcats also scored their two goals off corner kicks. Tose said the Wildcats place their tallest player near the inside post and then just aim for him. Both times, the ball was headed into the net giving Redmen keeper Bruce Milne no chance for the save.

"I felt defensively we played very well," said Tose. "The guys showed some improved hustle, challenged better and didn't give up."

Johnston, normally a halfback, played a solid game for the Redmen in his first game at forward. Other stand-outs in the game were Lutz Haedicke, Jeremy MacDuff and Darren Parsons who Tose said played his best game of the season.

The junior Redmen saw their record even out at 2-2 after being dropped 4-0 by the Wildcats. The score looks bad, but Tose reports that the juniors played well. The last time the Redmen played the Wildcats they also wound up on the short end of a 4-0 score.

"They definitely played a lot better than the last time they played Weldon. A couple of players were out with colds or the flu and that affected the team," says Tose.

Another player Jamie Thivierge, one of the Redmen's key offensive members, played despite being sick.

A scary moment for the Redmen occurred two minutes into the game when Andrew Wilbee and a Wildcat collided at full speed. Wilbee suffered a split lip and a few teeth were loosened and was taken to the hospital by Tose.

"It throws your game off when something like that happens. The players and the coach were a bit shaken up by it," said Tose.

Down just 1-0 at the half, the roof caved in on the Redmen in the second half as the Wildcats scored three unanswered goals to put the game out of reach.

Tose said the next two games are crucial for both teams. Only the top two teams from the Kawartha West division make the play-offs.

The juniors have beaten both their upcoming opponents, Fenelon Falls and L.C.V.I., and a pair of wins should mean a play-off berth.

The seniors, on the other hand will have a tougher time, Fenelon Falls battled them to a 1-1 tie in their first meeting while they hung on to beat L.C.V.I. 2-1.

One goal at a time

As a little girl, Kim Smith always wanted to play ice hockey with the boys. However, because she wasn't allowed, Kim gave up her hopes to play until highschool, when she heard about girls' field hockey. She joined the team in grade 10 figuring it was, as she put it, "As close to hockey as I could get."

Kim is now in grade 12 and has played on the HHSS field hockey team for three years. She is involved in many other sports at HHSS, including volleyball and soccer, but says she especially enjoys field hockey because of its competitiveness and fun.

This year, Kim is co-captain of the field hockey team along with Daureena Warburton who highly regards Kim's defensive talents.

Kim attributes many of her field hockey skills to her coach Mrs. Pizzezy, who she says is an excellent leader and a lot of fun on bus trips.

This summer, Kim attended two clinics about field hockey, one at York University and the other in Huntsville at the Olympia Sports Camp. Through these various camps, she has learned essential field hockey skills which make her a very dominant defensive centre.

So far this year, the girls' field hockey team has competed in three exhibition tournaments. In their first tournament at Bancroft, the girls won one game, lost one game and tied one game, with Kim's defensive line only letting one goal through.

At their next tournament in Scarborough the team faced incredible competition, including last year's OFSAA champions, and came out of the tournament with a 0-3 and 2 record. On October 3 the girls were again in tournament play in Sunnybrook where Kim played hard once again. From this tournament the team came home with first place.

In league play, the girls are at the top of the heap so far, and look very promising for a championship win at Kawartha.

We wish Kim and the rest of the girls' field hockey team good luck for a successful season.

probably over a 100 yards in penalties so that's probably our game plan this week is to work on minimizing our errors," said Brohman.

The junior Redmen, on the other hand, played 'watch my dust' with the Spartans scoring 47 points. There was never any doubt in this game as the Redmen picked up three touchdowns in the first quarter and at the half led 30-0.

The backfield of Tim Keefer, Peter Brohman and Aaron Tomlinson did most of the damage scoring all six majors. Keefer scored on runs of 108, 60 and 10 yards while Brohman racked up over 200 yards of rushing including touchdown runs of 55 and 70 yards (two others were called back). Newcomer to the backfield, Aaron Tomlinson scored on an off-tackle play of seven yards.

Chris Dobbins ran for two two-point converts while Brohman caught another from Sam Little.

Ryan Goodall, who is also a soccer player, kicked two converts and a 20 yard field goal.

"The score was getting so high that I said let's just try, it doesn't matter if we score and he was outstanding with his kicking," said Brohman.

Defensively, the Redmen have yet to yield a touchdown this season. Brohman said the Spartans do not have much of an offence so "we just dominated them, total domination."

Rotary to raise $250,000 for health care

The outlook on the future of health care facilities in the Minden area grew brighter again last week with a commitment of support from the Minden Rotary Club.

Rotary president Pat Murphy said the club is committed to raising $250,000 for future facilities in the Minden area. Half the commitment is targeted for long-term care and the rest is for acute care.

Rotary's decision comes just days after a local group announced the launch of its fundraising campaign. This group will be appealing to the public for contributions to ensure funds will be available once the studies have been completed.

Murphy notes that Rotary's commitment is not to a public fundraising drive. He said the money will be generated through the club's activities.

Rotary's involvement in the project will be strictly financial, said Murphy. It's the role of the local planning and development committee to conduct studies and make recommendations on what shape local health care should take, he said. "We do not wish to appear to be circumventing their decisions."

"Rotary wants to stay uninvolved in the decision making," said Murphy. "We respect that the committee represents the community."

The Ministry of Health has committed $2.3-million for long-term care facilities in Haliburton County. The community, however, must contribute one third of the cost of the projects.

The planning and development committee has decided to use half that amount on a 15-bed expansion to the Haliburton Hospital and is using the $600,000 raised in an earlier fundraising drive as the local contribution.

A study will soon be underway to determine the best location for another 15 long-term-care beds. If the decision is to place them in Minden, Rotary's contribution will be used as part of the local contribution to that project.

The planning and development committee is also examining a number of possibilities for future acute care services in the Minden area. Among the options are the construction of a new hospital, renovations to the existing hospital, and adding an extension to Hyland Crest.

Although the ministry has endorsed the study, it has not made any financial commitments.

Burgers and balloons

With a balloon in his hand and a burger in his belly, Matthew was in fine spirits during CHACE day at Dave's on 35 on October 3. Proceeds from all hamburger sales at Daves that day were donated to the local child enrichment organization, CHACE Place. Raffles and a yard sale were also among the activities of the day.

Counterfeit bills flutter through the county

During the week September 28 to October 4 officers of the Minden Detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police investigated the following incidents:

Thefts around the county

Minicock Lake - red Honda Model EX1000 generator, 12 gauge Cooey single-shot shot gun, .22 calibre Remington bolt action rifle

Eagle Lake Store - assorted brands of cigarettes valued over $1,290

Elephant Lake Rd. - computer system and calculators valued at $4,600

Furnace Falls - red Homelite chain saw

Harcourt Twp. - 1987 Honda TRX-25cc four wheel ATV

Stanhope Twp. - Merc 9.9 hp outboard motor

Guilford Twp. - 1992 red Dodge Dakota pick-up, Ontario license plate number XA2861

Charged break and enter

Three Hamilton residents have been charged with break and enter after police investigated a break-in at a local business and located the three in a local motel.

Jason Healey, 18, Jeffrey Oelkuch, 19, and a young offender are scheduled to appear in court in Minden on October 21, 1992.

Counterfeit American bills

At least five businesses in the county have been the victims of individuals passing counterfeit American $100 bills. Two suspects (male and female) either together or alone purchase a small amount of merchandise then offer to pay with an American $100 bill. The change returned on the purchase is pocketed by the individuals.

A large number of counterfeit bills were also passed in businesses in the Norland and Coboconk areas.

The female suspect is described as black, 25 to 30 years, five feet two inches, dark brown, semi-curly, neck-length hair, light blue jacket with dark lettering, wearing a gold watch on right wrist and wide gold bracelet on left wrist.

The male suspect is described only as a black male.

If you have seen these people or have a suspect $100 bill, contact the Ontario Provincial Police in Minden at 286-1431 or Crimestoppers at 1-800-563-8477.

Correction

A recent report on cultivation of cannabis in Gooderham showed Brian Noseworthy charged with the offence. This is not correct. In fact, the person charged was Mark Allan Noseworthy, age 24, of Lot 25, Con. 4, Glamorgan Twp.

We apologize to Brian Noseworthy for this error.

Carnarvon UCW serve residents tea

Sunday's chapel service was conducted by Rev. John Burgess with Alice Jones playing the organ. Thank you John and Alice, we appreciate your faithfulness.

The Hyland Crest Home Auxiliary met in the auditorium on Monday, September 28. A good number of members were present and plans for the future were discussed, especially plans for the Christmas Bazaar to be held November 6.

Monday evening, Pat Bradburn and Fern Donnelly came to show the movies.

Senior League

by Winnifred Barnum

They were "Rail Rodder" and "Blake." Pat had her mother with her and we thank Pat and Fern sincerely.

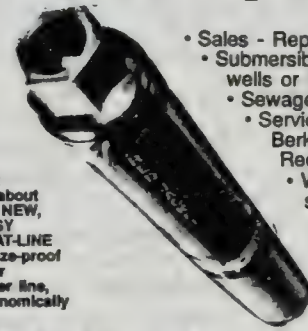

Tuesday morning, Father Salvatore held the chapel service with a good attendance. Thank you Father greatly. Tuesday we watched a video "A Man From Snowy River." A very good story and picture.

Since Doris Robertson has had the misfortune to be unable to work for a time, and she is our bus driver, we were unable to go to Dorset. Luckily, Merv Berry had time to take us for a drive so we could have our lunch at Pike's Peak, then to Lochlin, Haliburton for donuts and coffee, then along the North Shore Road of Lake Kashagawigamog and home. The leaves were beautiful. We enjoyed the trip and thank Merv Berry, Sylvia and Dick Thompson, Jean Robson, Jack Shedden and Lorraine Swinson for a happy afternoon.

The United Church Women from Carnarvon brought the Thursday Tea. As the women served the delicious tea, Ruth Gorrie played beautiful piano music for us. The ladies were Eileen Crawford, Pearl Foster, Marion McClelland and Sandy Johnston. We wish to thank them heartily.

Entertainers add their voices to battles for the environment

Los Angeles is still the mecca for people in the entertainment business. This world of multi-million dollar deals and double deals creates movies, music videos and television programs that shape the way we think and perceive the world around us.

And Hollywood may well play a key role in raising ecological awareness. It's worth reflecting why.

The human brain doesn't merely process information coming into it from the senses, it actively selects and discards incoming signals. Compare the recollections of two people involved in a heated argument or after they've seen a powerful movie.

Chances are, they will recount very different impressions. That's because we all have personal perceptual filters. And our past experiences shape the filters that control the way we see the world.

Heredity (by determining gender, physical make-up and appearance) and our environment (language, family, religion, socio-economic status, culture) delineate the spectrum of influential experiences we will have.

But increasingly, the media, particularly television and movies, have become very important in informing us, creating the world we know and shaping our values and expectations.

Today, we are assaulted with impressions of constant change, a jumble of unrelated stories that are juxtaposed helter skelter, countless reports of violence and above all, the joys of relentless conspicuous consumption, and they shape our beliefs and values.

If we are to begin to live within the ecological capacity of the planet to sustain, the central challenge is to influence the way people see their relationship to the biological and physical elements around them.

That means people who are a part of the media (performers, producers, directors, writers, etc.) play an essential role in changing public attitude to the environment. Right now, the overriding thrust of commercial television and feature films encourages ever increasing exploitation and consumption of resources that are ecologically destructive and unsustainable.

There is a genuine environmental concern among individuals within the entertainment industry. After a trip to the Amazon a few years ago, megastar Tom Cruise was so profoundly affected that he has become an outspoken proponent of rainforest protection.

Robert Redford has worked for years on environmental issues through his Sundance Institute, which has sponsored high powered conferences of environmentalists, politicians and entertainers.

John Denver set up the Windsor Foundation to promote ecological living while Sting has raised millions of dollars for his Rainforest Foundation to fund indigenous groups, primarily in the Amazon. There are dozens of stars who have donated their time and talents to support different environmental issues.

To spread environmental awareness within the entertainment industry, at least two organizations have been formed in

by David Suzuki

Los Angeles. One is E.C.O., Earth Communications Organization, which has a branch in Canada (Suite 140B, North Shore Studios, 555 Brooksbank Ave., N.

Vancouver, V7J 3S5). The other is E.M.A., Environmental Media Association (10536 Culver Blvd., Culver City, California, 90232).

The most important activity of both ECO and EMA is to encourage production of films with strong environmental messages or attitudes. And they do this in typical Hollywood fashion, by giving awards. Last week, I was invited to speak at the annual EMA awards night.

Held at the SONY Studios (formerly MGM), the glitz was deliberately downplayed (no spotlights or limousines and even a few electric cars). At $500 a ticket, the 700 places were sold out a week in advance.

Master of Ceremonies, comedian Sinbad, slyly teased the audience for the gaudy excesses of their profession while Jackson Browne and Bonnie Raitt entertained with music. Some of the awards presenters included Canada's Dan Aykroyd, Chevy Chase, Jeff Bridges, Donna Mills, Steve Guttenberg, Michael Keaton and Mariel Hemingway.

Among the categories, Feature Films winner was Fern Gully...The Last Rainforest (for which Raffi was nominated for his song last year), beating out Medicine Man, Thunderheart and Mindwalk. They give you an idea of the quality of environmental message being supported.

Norman Lear told me: "All the big people from the business are here. If a bomb hit this building, films wouldn't come out of Hollywood for at least two years."

It is heartening to see that concern for the environment is being taken seriously by some of the most important and influential members of the entertainment industry.

Fall art festival proves to be a popular attraction again this year

The Haliburton County Studio Tour was an enormous success again this year. Hundreds of people took advantage of the warm weather to soak in the beautiful autumn colours while travelling from one studio to the next. This year's tour took visitors into the homes and studios of some of the county's best artisans. There was also a generous helping of new talent in in this year's showcase, adding new dimension to this highly popular event. These photos feature a small sampling of the outstanding work being created by artisans in this county. Left: Rickie Woods turns clay into beautiful pottery under the watchful eye of her daughter. Right: Glenn Diezel's fine craftsmanship was admired by all who visited the gallery of Ellen James. Above: Jean Farrell works at her loom, producing wonderful patterns, fabrics and artworks.

Branch 129 welcomes District Commander Ken Bell

by Gerald Irish
Branch 129 Haliburton

On Thursday October 6, Deputy District Commander Ken Bell and his wife were in our village to enjoy the beautiful fall colours and also at our branch to renew old comradeships and meet new friends. Many members of our Legion executive and Legion friends were in the Mountbatten Room to visit with Ken and Shirley.

A delicious buffet luncheon was set out and everyone enjoyed this time together. Comrade Bell thanked everyone for the hospitality.

Many times during the past few years we have heard requests for a church parade. Comrade President Wally Chambers has arranged one for October 18. All who plan to attend are to assemble at the Legion to fall in a 10:30 a.m. We will march to the United Church for the service. Please plan to attend. Full Legion dress is preferable, but if not possible, come along anyway. This is a chance to hear and meet Branch 129's new padre, Harvey Morgan.

Good news for all our Highland friends. We have been successful in booking the very popular vaudeville show from Scotland, The Breath of Scotland. Joan and I received a call from Ronnie Coburn, president of Vaudeville International in Dundee, Scotland, and finalized all the necessary arrangements. The show will be here on April 20.

During the last few visits to our branch, I have become acutely aware of the hard work and dedication of Bill and Cathy Juby. Their's is not an easy job with both Ways and Means and Seniors to run, but they do so very successfully. I urge all Legion members to take time out to congratulate and thank Cathy and Bill for the great job they are doing for the branch.

There are still a number of tickets available for the Orangeville race trip on Sunday October 25. The price of $43 includes your bus trip, admission and program, delicious buffet dinner and all taxes. Sign up now. Don't miss out on this fun trip.

On October 17, members of the Bobcaygeon Legion, and on October 20, members of the Toronto Legion Branch 11, will be visiting our branch. Plan to come to your Legion on these afternoons and visit with your guests and ensure they receive a royal Haliburton Legion welcome.

Comrade Bill Juby has arranged for a bus to the Royal Winter Fair on November 17. The cost is only $25 and includes admission. Sign up sheets are in the club room.

We have been invited to attend the Remembrance Day parade and service in Brechin on October 25. Arrangements are being made for a bus to take us there and back. There is no charge for this bus trip.

Your Legion is a very busy place. Please keep checking the announcement boards in the club room. Join in. Be a participant.

Branch 129 sends congratulations to our neighbours and friends in Wilberforce on the re-opening and dedication of Ontario's first Red Cross Outpost Hospital.

Canada: the best in the world

On the basis of a human development index, the United Nations Development Program rated Canada the world's best country in which to live. Think of it. The best country.

And so, on such testimony and despite our quiet ways and our understated manner of governing ourselves and resolving our differences, the world at large has come to know us and to envy us. Indeed, Canada with its comparative peace and stability is the kinder and gentler nation that the United States would like to be. We are so highly regarded internationally that foreigners observing our unity debate can only shake their heads in amazement at what we are risking.

What is intuitive and obvious to outsiders, the dreadful risk of losing what we have, often appears to be imperfectly appreciated by Canadians themselves. Partly, such complacency stems from a kind of obliviousness, an utter inability, or perhaps utter unwillingness, to imagine anything other than the status quo. But partly too, it is a matter of disbelief. Many Canadians, though fully admitting that the failure of constitutional renewal could easily lead to the disintegration of the country, do not believe that such an end could affect them personally. They do not believe that they themselves would be worse off than before, or experience any significant adverse effect on their day to day living, their livelihoods or the quality of their lives. They seem to think that Quebec and the rest of Canada could simply go their separate ways, onward and upward as before and continue to enjoy their present economic standing and standard of living. Such a misconception ignores not only the age-old principle of cause and effect, but also the evidence at hand. One need only open any newspaper to become acquainted with the economic consequences that the very prospect, the mere possibility of constitutional failure, is inflicting upon the country. Economists and business leaders everywhere are insisting that Canada is already paying a price just for its political uncertainty.

They maintain, for example, that the perceived threat of a national breakup has already caused many business plans and plant-location decisions to be cancelled or put on hold. Investors and leaders are waiting to see what happens. Far from reassuring them, failure on the constitutional front could only compound the economic uncertainty.

Report from Ottawa

from the office of Bill Scott, MP

The Business Council on National Issues has determined that the costs of fragmentation would be slower economic growth, higher interest rates and further deferment of business investment. These are all factors that would slow job creation, increase unemployment and put our standard of living in jeopardy. One of the key messages of the many corporate and financial leaders who are taking part in the unity debate may be summarized in the words of Bank of Montreal chairman Matthew Barrett: "The standard of living which a united country has fostered would not survive its breakup." Words to ponder.

The renewal of Canada seeks to secure our standard of living by reforming and improving our political institutions so that they will work as well for us in the future as they have in the past. As a united country, we have achieved a proud economic record, a record that gives us every reason to feel confident about our future. Times have been admittedly tough lately, but only as a united country can we be sure of toughing them out. No province is an island and Canada is not an island in the world. Whatever our differences, all Canadians can agree on one thing. We all want to secure a lasting constitutional settlement so that governments in every region and at all levels may turn their full attention to economic recovery and growth. Some Canadians, however, have been complaining that the process of constitutional renewal has been obscuring the bread-and-butter issues of the economy, the so-called pocketbook issues such as employment. What these people fail to realize is that the pocketbook issues are inextricably linked to national unity. Our jobs, our financial stability, our standard of living, our prosperity, depend on the achievement of a lasting constitutional settlement.

Around the County Town

by Jeanne Sears (call 286-1538)

Mr and Mrs Hector Gray of Oakville and Mrs Margaret Marks of Thornhill were weekend guests of Mr and Mrs Earl Hewitt.

Sunday, October 2, a gathering at the Library/Cultural Centre was held to oversee the drawing of the winning ticket on the raffle for the beautiful quilt made and donated by Laura Kirkwood. Laura told of the making of the quilt and expressed her appreciation and thanks to the ladies of the community who did the fine quilting at Hyland Crest Craft room and to those who sold the many tickets. Bob Harrington turned the drum and Laura drew ticket # 1251 held by L. Zimmerman of Alberton, Ontario. The funds raised from this project are going toward the expenses of the County Town Museum's "Wee Kirk". It was also noted that the Museum committee members will not have a meeting in October.

Winners in the Monday weekly euchre games at St. Paul's Anglican Church on October 5 were Gladys Wruth with most lone hands, Joyce Hewitt, Verna McDonald, Pearl Cowen and Nancy Gayton. The draw was won by Ruby Shaw and the next games will be held October 19 following a luncheon at 12 noon.

Milton and Margaret Fletcher expressed their thanks to Pearl and Jim Foster for opening their home and inviting friends to celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary. A great time was had by all, especially the wedding party.

June Beeney of Minden was the lucky winner of the beautiful Haliburton Highlands tartan blanket gifted by the Haliburton Highlands Handweavers and Spinners to the Agnes Jamieson Gallery. Congratulations June!

Mr and Mrs Jack Dart of Oshawa visited relatives last weekend and spent some time at their cottage.

Mr and Mrs Burt Smith of Kingston spent the weekend with Celia Brown and visited with many friends while in the area.

The winners at Stanhope Tuesday Bridge games on September 29 included Jack Croucher, Claudia Watters and Barry Cowlings. Winners in October were Lyle Lucas, Thelda Weston and Ray Brown.

Gerald and Betty Hicks visited friends in Oshawa last weekend.

On September 23, 1992, Mr and Mrs Ben Corless of Hunter Creek Estates celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary. They celebrated by a cross-Canada train trip to Victoria where they visited with their daughter Susan then returning by air. They were accompanied by their son John and his wife Bonnie of Peterborough.

Winners at October 1 Legion euchre games included Verna McDonald and Gladys

Wruth, most lone hands lady and gent; Marg McAfee and Willard Bridgman, high scores and Jean Hewitt and Joyce Wiltshire. The draw winners included Marg McAfee, Iris Taylor, L.C. Trodd, Betty Harper, Murray MacKinnon, Jean Scadden and John Klok.

Sincere good wishes to the following people who are not too well at present: Lilian Kinghorn, Gordon Kellett, Ruby Francis, Olive Meyers, Jack Austin, Wes Baker, Judd Campbell, Helen Johnson, Bill Mosely, Lee Turner, Norm Marrow, Ann McAdam, Jean Anderson and Mary Hamilton. We hope you will all be feeling much better soon.

At the first euchre games at the Gelert Centre held Tuesday, October 6, the winners were Norma Hamilton, most lone hands while others included Dorothy Milburn, Anne Schrader, Grenville Schrader and Norm Harrison Sr. The next games at Gelert will be October 20.

Ruby Francis and Family attended a 25th wedding anniversary party for Jim and Dianne Francis in Peterborough recently.

Marie Dennie, Bev. Johnston, Corinne Arsenault, Edith Burch, Verna McDonald, Sheila Burke, Mollie McKenzie and Jeanne Sears from Minden Legion Ladies Auxiliary attended the Legion Cribbage Tournament in Cobocok on Saturday, October 4. One of the Minden teams came second with Kinmount being first and Haliburton ladies third. They enjoyed a delicious supper with the hostess branch Cobocok.

CO's draw holiday duty

The Ministry of Natural Resources has assigned Conservation Officers to work on all statutory holidays for the balance of the 1992-93 fiscal year.

The decision, by Ontario's Natural Resources Minister Bud Wildman, was made after reviewing concerns that the ministry needed to provide a stronger enforcement presence on statutory holidays and in potential emergency situations.

The decision to cover statutory holidays goes into effect immediately, and began with the Thanksgiving weekend, traditionally a popular time for hunting. Up to half the province's 265 Conservation Officers will work all statutory holidays with staffing adjusted to cover areas where the need is highest and for Christmas and Boxing Day.

The ministry has had to review its expenditures and reduce costs wherever possible as a result of the current recession.

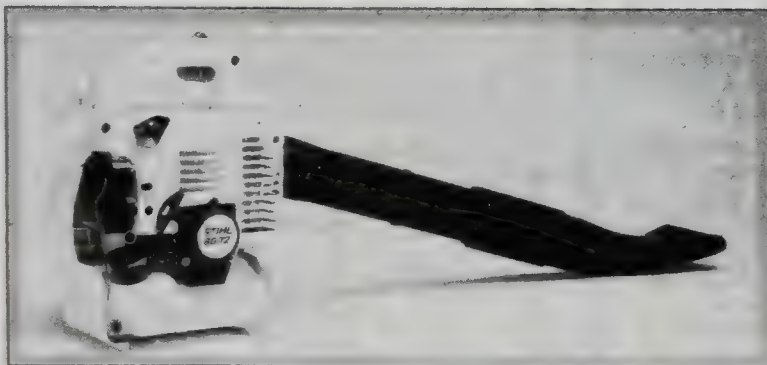

As part of its effort to reduce expenditures, the ministry has asked managers, including managers in enforcement, to use the utmost discretion in allocating overtime.

"We have obligations to meet when it comes to the province's fish and wildlife and conservation laws and we intend to meet those obligations to the best of our ability," said Mr. Wildman. "For conservation officers, this means continuing to respond to emergencies and other situations that require immediate attention."

The Minister also urged people with information on possible infractions of fish and wildlife laws to call their local MNR district office during business hours, or the local Crime Stoppers. The local number is 1-800-563-TIPS

IN MEMORIAM

JOHNSTON, MYLES ELLWOOD: In loving memory of a dear son and brother who was killed October 11, 1968. We do not need a special day, To bring you to our mind, The days we do not think of you, Are very hard to find. Always a thought, and many a tear, For the darling boy, We love so dear. The sudden way, you had to die, We shall always remember, And wonder why. When you tried so hard To avoid having to die, So treasure our Myles Lord, In your Garden of rest. In his young manhood, He was one of the best. Dearly loved and sadly missed by Mom, brother and sisters.

IN MEMORIAM

McAFEE, GORDON: In loving memory of a loving husband, father and grandfather who passed away October 12, 1990. A sadness still comes over us, Tears in silence often flow, Memory keeps you ever near us, Though you died two years ago. Sadly missed by Margaret and Family.
